

Welcome to Thanolis!

My recent excursions took me to the city of Kingsport. Upon arriving I found the docks were bustling with people. There was a short little man who appeared to be ordering everyone around. I introduced myself and he told me he was the harbormaster. A stroll through town took me by the Brothers of the Silver Pestal and the Scroll and Compass. The building smelt a bit off as I approached so I decided to continue on my way. Further into town I passed the Guard house. I have to say those guys sure are impressive. They're the kind of guys I'd like to have on my side in a dark alley at night. And of course no trip to Kingsport could be complete without a trip to the Spirit's Refuge and the Kingsport Mystic Counsel. Depending on the time of day you might run into one of the two dames that run the place. Both of them are a bit snooty, I think it might have been that time of the month. Last, but not least I stopped in at the Midus Well and had a drink with the manager Miss Ginny (but don't tell her I called her that). The new help is a bit...scaly compared to the old help but he seems to be dedicated to his work. Something seems a bit off with him, but I can't seem to put my finger on it. I think something bad happened to him, poor fellow. I wanted to rent a wagon to take down to Idyllbrook but I was told it would be best to wait for a ferry. Apparently taking a stroll through the Spider Silk Woods isn't the best idea according to the locals. I ended up taking a trip over to Windemere before heading out, a trip which I definitely don't regret! The stonework of that city is amazing, some of the best I've seen in my short years.

William Woolsworth